CITY NEWS At the Navy, three new destroyers are arriving this year, one more next year. More Navy families will be coming to Everett.

Grand Ave Park pedestrian bridge construction will start at end of 2016 and finish in 2017. Port is getting ready to move the Weyerhaeuser building to Boxcar Park at the waterfront, and the farmers market was very packed yesterday.

Light rail is coming to Everett in the ST3 package – by end of week we will know more about the package. Mayor sees the need to get Sound Transit to move scheduled arrival here by 2035 – under discussion is a station stop on way to Boeing, a stop at 99 airport road, a provisional stop. Need to have this planned and ready if federal funding becomes available.

WSU building going up and is scheduled to open next year. Legislative session awarded $580,000 to start organic agriculture degree program. Another degree being developed is software and data analytics. Also Elson Floyd College of Medicine will open by 2019 with 15 students doing 3rd year of study here in Everett. Providence and Everett Clinic in community will host these students.

Mayor Stephanson: He reported that the Charter Review committee's work is going to city council in June. Go to city website everettwa.gov/charterreview to look at details. Go to city website everettwa.gov/charterreview to look at details.

Metro Everett project is moving forward. Public comments can be submitted on line through the new tool "Community Voice" forum. There is a survey on line until June West Marine View Drive corridor improvements will be underway very shortly and are to be completed by end of year. Improvements to Rucker for pedestrian friendly changes will start at end of 2016 and finish in 2017.

Low Barrier Housing – the city has identified a potential site for low barrier housing after a search city-wide. Lead staff are working with Public Works and Fire department to develop housing on site that does not impact these essential operations. On-site case management will be provided at the housing.

Low Barrier Housing is permanent, supportive housing for homeless men and women, who have mental health and or substance abuse issues. The City's goal is to provide housing for these chronically homeless individuals who are the highest utilizers of city and community resources. Everett's facility will have controlled access, on site case management and needed support services. This model has proven successful in other states.

Mayor is mindful of potential impacts, and there will be plenty of opportunity for comment. Planning Commission took action and city council will take action on code amendment on Wednesday June 8th at the city Council meeting to allow some changes to zoning code to allow special housing on public property.

Two embedded social worker positions are now in the budget - first person will be starting in June. Our police officers are taking Crisis Intervention training, 40 hours. Everett is one of only two cities taking this level of training.

For information on the Everett's Safe Streets Plan & Low Barrier Housing go to the city website; www.everettwa.gov then select Community on top of page and in that drop down box select the Safe Streets and Low Barrier information will also be on that page.

Coffee with a Cop Wednesday June 22nd at 6:30 PM at the Main Library

Chief of Police Dan Templeman and EPD Communications Officer Aaron Snell will be on hand to answer any questions from the community.
