7. ACCESSORY DWELLING UNITS

Accessory dwelling units (ADUs) provide important opportunities for new, and usually affordable, housing options in established neighborhoods at a relatively small scale. Reducing and simplifying regulations for development of accessory units can also help meet city goals related to housing affordability, variety, ownership, and capacity. At its March 1 meeting, the planning commission will hear a briefing on accessory dwelling units and will be asked for feedback on potential amendments to development regulations.
